Impy Ink's Insects

Impy Ink is sitting with some children in the classroom at school. They are looking at some twigs in a glass case.

“If you look into the case carefully,” says the teacher, “you will see some little insects.”

“I can't see any insects. I can only see twigs,” says Impy. “They must be invisible insects!”

“Look again, it's quite difficult to see them,” the teacher explains.

 Impy

“These insects have an interesting way of protecting themselves. They look just like twigs. It helps them to hide very well indeed.”

“That’s why they are called stick insects!” says a little girl called Isobel.

“That’s very interesting!” says Impy Ink.

“Aren’t stick insects incredible? Just imagine what it must be like to behave like a stick all day long!”

Can you stay as still as a stick insect?

 incredible
